

Community Meetings to Shape the Future of Transit in Denton County

DCTA is in the process of updating the Authority's Service Plan to better outline future transit needs throughout the county. The plan will define future transit service corridors, identify how to improve transit connections, recommend opportunities to expand services, and provide a road map to guide DCTA's investment decisions in the coming decades.

The DCTA team has spent the last several months collecting feedback and conducting research to determine community viewpoints and potential needs and to compare DCTA's performance with its transit peers. Some of the priorities identified include a desire for transit service in the I-35W corridor, connections to Collin County, improved and expanded transit options, and stable funding for DCTA.

These results of this research and community input will be presented to the public at a series of community meetings. People who live, work or go to school in Denton County are invited to attend the meetings to talk with project planners and share their opinions about the future of public transportation.
